

HARDING'S FIRST
WESTERN SPEECH
ON WORLD COURT

Explains to St. Louis Audience Real Meaning of Proposed Tribunal
—Difference From League
of Nations

CHANGES SINCE TIME WASH-INGTON'S FAREWELL ADDRESS

By Associated Press

ST. LOUIS, June 22.—President Harding placed before the country tonight a renewed plea for American adherence to the Permanent Court of International Justice "as the one and only existing agency of peace, to which we can safely subscribe without violating the basic principles of our national being."

Making the first prepared address of his western trip, the President said that to bring about the end he desired he "would gladly wipe out factional difference," and proposed a reconstruction of the machinery of the international tribunal "to dispose conclusively of all other cited apprehensions of danger from the exercise of any influence whatsoever, either open or furtive, by the League of Nations or by any other organization."

"This could be done in one of two ways," he asserted, "first, by empowering the court itself to fill any vacancy arising from the death of a member or retirement, for whatever cause, without interference from any other body; or, second, by continuing the existing authority of the Permanent Court of Arbitration to nominate and by transferring the power to elect from the council and assembly of the league to the remaining members of the court of justice."

Then anticipating "the voice of the doubter," who might inquire whether the 40 nations now represented on the court would consent to these changes in the structure of the tribunal, Mr. Harding answered that "to submit terms which we consider essential to the preservation of our nationality is not an act of discourtesy; it is the only fair, square and honorable thing a great, self-respecting nation can do."

The President devoted virtually all of his address to the World Court issue but he also viewed briefly what had been done by his administration to get the country "back on the right track" in its domestic affairs. Although declaring he did not come to make a "partisan report," he said he took pride in pointing out that unemployment had been "banished," financial stability restored, taxes lightened, and great economies effected in government.

Washington's Farewell Address was taken by the Chief Executive as his point of departure when he turned to foreign relations. American adhesion to the court he said, squared with the principles enunciated by Washington, who recognized the value of international arbitration.

Elaborating upon his pronouncement that the court must not be a league court, the Executive asserted that the country had no opportunity to indicate its desire to join the league in 1920 and it "most emphatically refused" and "it would refuse again, no less decisively today."

Mr. Harding said he recognized rudiments of good in the league organization, however, and repeated his declaration of 1920 that he hoped to "take and combine all that is good and excise all that is bad" from the league and the League Tribunal.

"It is a true judicial tribunal. Its composition is of the highest order. None better, none freer, from selfish, partisan, national, or racial prejudices or influences could be obtained. That, to the best of my information and belief, is a fact universally admitted and accepted. I care not whence the court came. I trust only that its integrity, its independence, its complete and continuing freedom be safeguarded absolutely."

"The sole question is whether the requirements which I have enumerated as essential to adherence by the United States can be met. My answer is that where there is a unanimous will, a way can always be found. I am not wedded irrevocably to any particular method. I would not assume for a moment that the readjustment of the existing arrangement which appears to my mind as feasible is the best, much less the only, one. But, each as it is, I submit it, without excess of detail, as a basis for consideration, discussion and judgment."

The President then presented his proposal for a self-perpetuating court and added:

"The fixing of compensation of the judges, the supervision of expenditures, the proportionment of contributions

WASHINGTON, June 22.—Any attempt of United Mine Workers of America in combination with unions of foreign countries to prevent shipment of coal from abroad into the United States during the progress of coal strikes here will be "prevented by the government of the United States promptly and forcefully," Attorney General Daugherty declared today in a letter to the Federal Coal Commission. Daugherty said his attention had been called to what he claimed to be a contract between miners officials here and abroad providing for such a check to shipments during strikes. He asked the coal commission to give him any facts it may have in order action may be taken "as is justifiable."

John Hays Hammond, chairman of the commission, said an investigation would be made but the commission had no official data on the matter. It was recalled, however, that John Lewis, president of the miner's union, recently returned from England and perfected some sort of agreement abroad.

SALVATION ARMY ASKS HELP FOR FAMILY BURNED OUT

The Salvation Army is asking help for a family of husband and wife, and five children, all under twelve, who recently lost all they had in a fire. They particularly need a bed, chairs, and a table, and children's clothing. The articles may be turned in to the Salvation Army or persons having anything to donate may inquire of the Salvation Army where to find the destitute family.

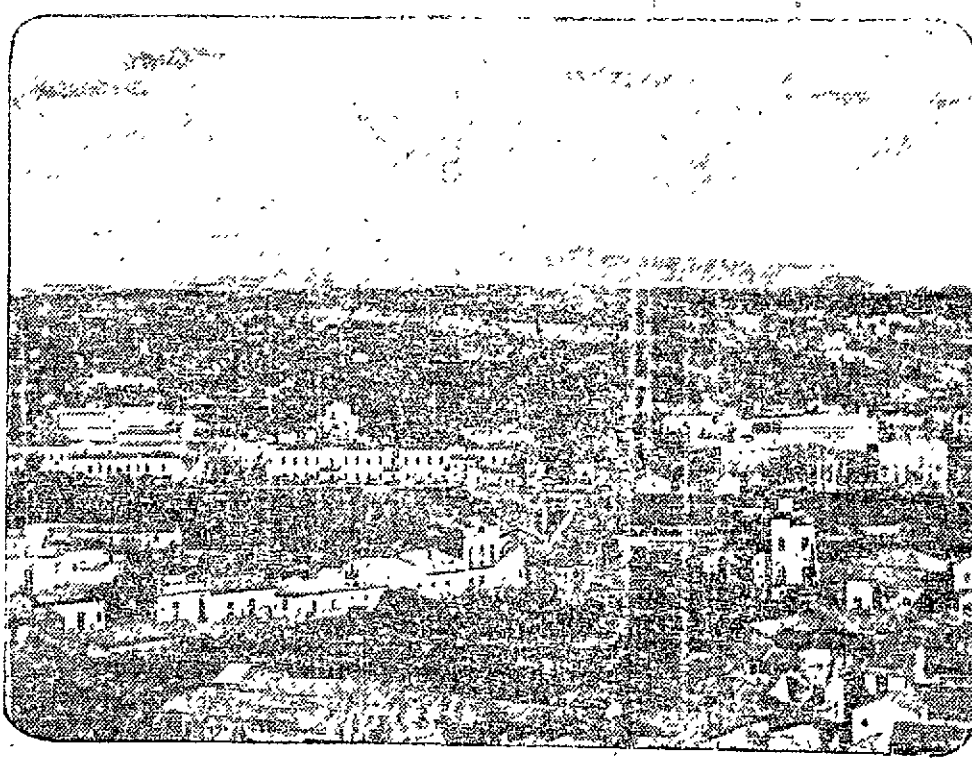

The league to ethic court of arbitration in a commission designated by the member nations. Thus, incidentally would be averted the admitted unfairness of the present system, which imposes a tax upon members of the league who are not subscribers to the court.

"The exclusive privilege now held by the league to seek advisory legal guidance from the court might either be abolished, or, more wisely perhaps, be extended to any member or group of member nations. Thus all would be served alike, subject as now to determination by the court itself of the kind of questions upon which it would render judgments."

"The disparity in voting as between a unit nation and an aggregated empire, which now maintains in the assembly of the league, to which many object because of apprehensions which I do not share, would, under this plan, disappear automatically."

"I shall not restrict my appeal to your reason. I shall call upon your patriotism. I shall beseech your humanity. I shall invoke your Christianity. I shall reach to the very depths of your love for your fellow men of whatever race or creed throughout the world. I shall speak, as I speak now, with all the earnestness and power of the sincerity that is in me and in perfect faith that God will keep clear and receptive your understanding."

"I could not do otherwise. My soul yearns for peace. My heart is agonized by the sufferings of war. My soul is eager to serve. My passion is for peace over force. My hope is in the court. My mind is made up. I shall not be deterred from my course. My faith is fixed."

WHERE DEATH STALKS

In the background is Mt. Etna now thousands of feet wide and 40 feet high, rendering nearly 100,000 inhabitants of Sicily homeless. Ten townships with homes, such as those shown in the foreground, have been totally destroyed.

Mt. Etna, Again in Eruption, Has Been Violent Many Times in Past

MT. ETNA, after three months of ominous threatening again is in eruption. Thousands are now fleeing from their homes in the fertile valleys at the base of the slope and several cities, notably Catania and Girone, are in danger of being buried by the deluge of molten lava. Girone is reported in grave danger.

Probably the oldest and surely the most colorful of all volcanoes, is Etna. Scenes of horror like the one now being enacted in the fertile Sicilian valley, date back to the eighth century B. C. Etna is located on the east coast of Sicily. Its summit is approximately 18 miles northwest of Catania, the city which now is in danger, according to news dispatches, of being deluged by a flood of lava.

Etna's height, in 1900, was ascertained to be 10,738 feet. It decreased from 10,870, the height in 1863. The volcano covers about 460 square miles and by rail the distance about the base of the mountain is 86 miles, though as the railway in some places travels high the actual measurement is 99 miles.

The general height could not have been very different in ancient times, for building left from the Roman era now may be found only 1188 feet below the present summit.

The southwest portion of the mountain the deepest was perhaps the original crater. There are about 200 subsidiary cones, some over 3000 feet high. Experts estimate Etna older even than Vesuvius. It takes about seven or eight hours to reach the top.

Eruptions are recorded as far back as the eighth and fifth centuries B. C. Catania was overwhelmed in 1169 and many other serious eruptions have taken place. These were in 1600, 1830, 1852, 1876, 1886, 1892, 1899 and March 1910.

Recent warm weather has had a beneficial effect on vegetables of surrounding farms. Home-grown beans, beets, radishes and other products are beginning to appear on the Middlesboro markets. Lettuce, greens and onions have been on the market for some time.

Most of the vegetables for the local markets are grown on Tennessee farms. Others are brought in from Virginia and from farms around Middlesboro. On account of the distance that most of the produce must be brought, the prices are very little lower than that brought from the markets farther south.

By Associated Press

Voluntary manslaughter was the verdict found in the Sparlin Bowman case by the jury late yesterday afternoon. The penalty for the crime will be a twenty-one year sentence in the state reformatory.

Bowman was charged with shooting and killing Fred Howard near Wadsworth on the evening of May 6. His trial here began Monday. The Commonwealth attorneys urged a conviction for murder. The defendant alleged self-defense. The case went to the jury at noon yesterday and a verdict was not reached until about 5 o'clock in the afternoon.

Arguments in the case of Charlie Lane who is being tried for complicity in the crime began this afternoon and it was thought that the case would go to the jury late this afternoon. Jim Golden and Judge Davis, representing the Commonwealth and John Howard and G. L. Leebow, defendant's counsel made the arguments. The Commonwealth attorneys claimed that Lane was the more guilty of the two; the defense claimed that he was not responsible for the death of Howard.

Two Williams Men Arrested For Crime
Relatives of Williams Boy Dead
Officer Killed In Arresting
Some Months Ago

ATKINS CONSIDERED ONE OF
BEST OFFICERS IN COUNTY

Bill Atkins, deputy sheriff of Bell county, was shot and killed from ambush near his home at Four Mile at 6 o'clock this morning. Jim Williams and Germany Williams were arrested a few hours later and are held in connection with the crime.

Mr. Atkins was employed in night guard duty by the Kentucky Utilities company where the new power plant is being built on Cumberland river. He was returning to his home this morning when he was fired upon from ambush about 150 yards from his house. He walked about forty steps after being shot before he fell to the ground and died.

Sheriff Martin Green, Chief Deputy Vanheber and Squire Creech were immediately notified and arrived on the scene about fifteen minutes after the fatal shooting. The officer had two bullet wounds in his shoulder. It is not known whether the weapon used was a rifle, pistol or shotgun. If it were the latter, it had been loaded with buckshot, two of which struck the deceased. The downward angle of the bullets indicated that the shooting was done from a nearby hill. The body was taken to his home and later removed to the Arnett funeral parlor at Pineville.

Gathering such proof as to the identity of the slayers as was available, the sheriff and his men arrested Jim and Germany Williams in the vicinity of Four Mile about 9 o'clock this morning. They are relatives of a Williams boy whom Atkins killed several months ago when attempting to make an arrest. He was acquitted of the charge at Barbourville recently.

Arrangements were made to bring witnesses before the grand jury here this afternoon so that an indictment could be lodged against the defendants.

The deceased who was about fifty years old has been an officer in this county for some time. Men who knew him intimately say he was one of the most trustful and efficient officers that the county has ever had. He is survived by a wife and several children.

MINERS ARE PUSHING OR-

KNOXVILLE June 22.—"We have as much right to organize as the operators," said William Turnblazer, district president of the United Mine Workers yesterday. "The fight has now started and we have not fallen asleep yet the switch either," he said.

President Turnblazer made this statement in corroboration with the recent announcement to the effect that an open attempt will be made by the United Mine Workers of this district to organize all miners of Tennessee and southeastern Kentucky. This plan has been approved by John L. Lewis, international president.

Word has been received by the United Mine Workers of this district that a number of miners were discharged because they attended the convention of United Mine Workers held in Middlesboro recently. Word to this effect, together with names of those discharged has been sent to headquarters in Cincinnati.

The operators are at present holding a meeting in Atlantic City as an organization and we are as much entitled to have an organization as they have," said President Turnblazer.

A THOUGHT

If any man desire to be first, the

MAKE THE SCHOOL HOUSE SAFE

The recent terrible fire in the town schoolhouse of Cleveland, South Carolina, in which seventy-three persons were killed and a number of others were injured comes as a climax to an alarming number of school fires in various parts of the country and again emphasizes the regrettable hazardous conditions prevailing in schools throughout the United States.

The situation has been summed up by W. D. Malabian, general manager of the National Board of Fire Underwriters, who said in commenting upon the South Carolina fire: "There are other schools in all parts of the United States that are veritable fire traps and similar catastrophes are certain to occur in such structures unless a greater attention is paid to fire hazards
in school buildings."
According to our records, this is the worst school fire since that which took place at Colliwong, Ohio, in 1908, when 373 children lost their lives. In this fire, which started from an overheated steam pipe, the panic-stricken children piled up against a locked exit door and perished before they could be rescued.

School fires result from many causes,
however, although the heating plant is chiefly responsible, and The National Board's statistics show that they occur at the rate of five a day, on the average. Property losses in school buildings amount to about $5, 261,000 annually, but the most serious
feature is the fire hazard involved.

For several hours each day, during approximately two hundred days of the year, 25,000,000 children are found in the school rooms of the United States. Their attendance is compulsory and we have no educational problem more fundamental than that of insuring safety for the children thus assembled.

THE ROAD TO FERN LAKE

It is the fashion these days to discuss street and road improvement and construction in and around Middleboro. In connection with this, it is odd that no provision and no discussion has ensued in regard to the road leading out from Middleboro to Fern Lake.

Fern Lake is probably Middleboro's favorite attraction. Here is the lovely little lake, suppiere by day, rose and violet hued at sunset and standing out a deep emerald at twilight, an embodiment of all the beauties ever claimed by lakes. To the east looms
the Pinnacle and the mountain range, a fitting background for the scene. On either side rise wooded hills, inter-sprinkled with every variety of wild flower. The lake extends some distance to the west, unfolding new beauties
all the way to whoever wishes to explore it.

This is a spot which must be seen to be appreciated and must be seen over and over again. Yet the road from Middleboro leading out to it, a little more than a mile in length, is one of the worst in all this section and one which is almost impassable in bad weather. The lake is almost always the first thing visitors want to see here. It should be the mecca for all tourists, whose favor we are seeking at all times. But who wants to take the most unpleasant drive necessary
before reaching the lake?

Surely this is a matter which should be given immediate attention. If it is not a question for the city it is surely one for the citizens and one which the person who is interested in building up Middleboro's popularity cannot ignore.

THE PLAY

There is a runner on first base and one man out. With two strikes and two balls on the batter, the runner on first starts to steal of the next pitch.

The ball is inside, but the batter cleats to hit it. He takes a healthy swing but misses. As the batter misses the third strike, the pitch is so far inside it ticks the batsman's shirt.

The catcher handles the ball perfectly and makes an accurate throw to second to get the runner who was trying to steal that base. The ball arrives in advance of the runner and the shortstop, who handled the throw touched him with the ball a foot in front of the base.

What is the proper ruling?

THE INTERPRETATION

When a pitched ball at which the batsman strikes and misses, comes into contact with the person of the batsman, the ball becomes dead.

In the play cited, it happened to be the third strike.

It would have retired the batter
whether or not the ball was caught by the catcher.

The fact that the ball was caught by the backstop, made no particular difference. It in no way gave him the right to throw to second.

The ball was dead when it hit the batter, and the runner who tried for second and apparently was thrown out, should have been sent back to first base, as no play was possible once the ball became dead.

LETTER FROM LESLIE PRESCOTT TO JOHN ALDEN PRESCOTT, CONTINUED

Through some mistake, John dear, only the first part of my letter got in to the envelope I sent you yesterday.
I found the rest of it in my waste basket.

If I remember rightly I had just spoken to you about the girl who was trying to commit suicide. With this explanation I am sending the rescued sheets.

Then I heard a man's voice say,
"Don't be a fool, Saucha. Of course you want to live. No man not even I is worth dying for."

"Oh, Jenn, Jenn, why did you marry?
the girl said. "I believed in you so thoroughly. I gave you all my love when I gave you myself. I did not dream that you did not care for me, that it was only the thrill of loving that moved you."

"Life is not worth living without you Jenn, and last night, when I saw that beautifully dressed, jolly regular,
splendidly built woman at your side,
something just snapped in my brain
and I wrote you the note telling you that you must meet me on this boat tonight."

"I intended to kill you and myself.
See here, I have a revolver."

There was a slight scuffle and the man evidently succeeded in taking it from the woman.

"I would not give it to you," she panted,
"If I could really shoot you, but when I saw you, Jenn, I knew I could not do that. I could kill myself but not you so I determined to throw myself overboard, just as you reached me."

"Jenn, I can't stand it. My thoughts drive me mad. I picture you giving her the same caresses that you gave me. I hear you calling her the same endearing words that you spoke to me. Oh Jenn, Jenn! I know that she cannot love you as I do."

"Hush Saucha. Someone will hear you."

"That's it. That's it. Always we women who dwell in the shadow of some man's perfidy must never raise our voices for anyone will hear. We must not even show the travail of our souls for fear someone out there in the moonlight may see."

"Do you suppose that woman you have married would be content to bury herself behind your misdeeds as I have done? Will she keep your infidelity any longer than I did? Has she ever made you happier than I? Has she devoted all her waking hours to you and felt herself cheated when you did not fill her dreams?

"Thank God I did one thing for you,
Jenn, I have left with you a memory
that must always throw a dark shadow
over any other love."

"Hush, Saucha, hush. You knew that some time we would have to part. I told you that. You knew that no man can tell how long love may last. It might have been you, Saucha, that stopped loving and left me."

"Stop, Jenn! you know better than that. You know that a woman does not forget the man she loves as I have loved you."

"Where will you go Saucha?"

"Oh I will not attempt to kill myself again. I see, after all, you are neither worth dying or living for. Just at this moment I am for myself."

"Don't worry," says the Optimist:
"If you should lose your hard-earned
pelf,

Keep up your head, throw out your chest
(I've written stuff like that myself.)

"Laugh at your woes and never grieve Be brave," they counsel us but, when They strike some troubles of their own,
Well, that is Something Else Again!

Although your courage may be strong
You cannot always spot a smile:
Sometimes when things are going wrong

It does you good to groan awhile.
The other fellow's ills, in turn
You did him hear; but now and then
When You have got an aching tooth,
Well, that is Something Else Again!

"Don't worry," says the Optimist.
And that's an easy thing to say,
But when bad fortune will persist,
You wonder How They Get That Way!

Poverty Forces War Hero's Widow To Sell His Many War Decorations

LONDON, June 22.—Honored and idolized during his life, now almost completely forgotten in his death, General Sir John S. Cowans, national hero, is the central figure of another grim tragedy of the war's aftermath.

It's the tragedy of a nation's ingratitude; and its victim is the general's widow, Lady Cowans, who has been forced through dire poverty to take the medals and awards which her husband won and put them up for sale.

Forty years ago John Cowans first joined the British army and when the World War broke out he was made quartermaster general of all the British forces.

When the war over the general became ill. He had to go into debt to pay his doctors' bills for the war had played havoc with his $10,000 estate.

A ray of hope came when awards for heroism were being handed out. Cowans was in line for something, but while others were made nobles and given huge money grants, Cowans was knighted.

He died a few months ago. There

HEALTH RESORT HOTELS IN SANITARY CONDITION

By Associated Press.

LOUISVILLE, June 22.—Kentucky health resorts this year, hold out a welcoming hand, that is both sanitary and thoroughly cleaned, according to information received from reports being sent into the headquarters of the State Board of Health by the hotel and summer resort inspectors who now are making investigations of every watering place in the state in anticipation of the summer rush of vacationists.

Although only a small part of the state has been covered so far, this year, every hotel visited showed marked improvement in sanitary conditions; better methods for disposal of refuse and protection of water supplies, according to reports.

E. B. Wetzel is inspector for the western district and C. S. Porter is inspector for the eastern district of the state. E. F. Worthington, inspector of dairies, also is assisting in the inspection of the summer resorts.

"So far," said Miss Sarah H. Vance, director of the Bureau of Pure Food, and Drugs, "the inspectors, whose visits are unheralded, have found only the most sanitary conditions and each instance where recommendations were made last year, the faults have been eliminated."

WOMAN ENROLLS LAWMAKERS IN TREE PLANTING ARMY

INDIANAPOLIS, June 22.—The state legislature of Indiana goes on record as the first law-making body in the United States to join the tree-planting army of the country.

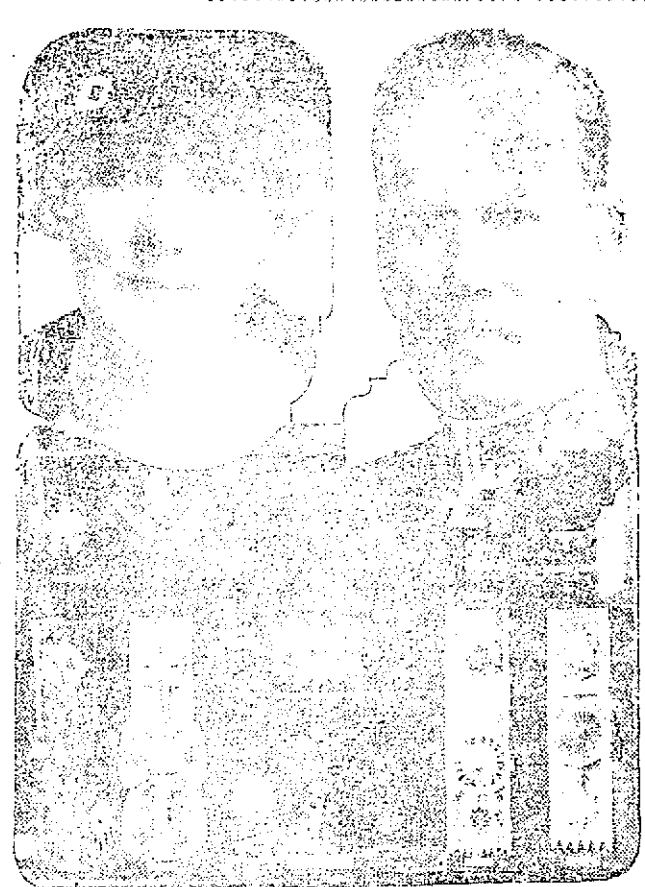

Its action was influenced by Miss Lucy Campbell of the Nature Study Club of Indiana.

There's no red tape in joining this ever-growing organization of tree planters. All that is required is the planting of a tree and registering it, and the planter becomes a member of the American Tree Association.

Miss Campbell had added many new members of her local branch of the association before she tackled the legislature. When she did, every member of that body fell into line.

The state legislature officially has adopted the tulip as the state tree. As a result, the Nature Study Club has presented each representative and Gov. Warren T. McCray with a tulip tree and has sent two trees into each county of the state.

This is but a starter for what the Nature Study Club plans to do toward answering the American Tree Association's call to celebrate the centennial of Arbor Day in 1972 by planting the trees now. The association at Washington will send any one tree planting suggestions and a tree day program and it urges every one to plan for fall planting now just as Indiana is doing.

was a large military funeral. Kind words and then complete forgetfulness.

The widow struggled along for a while, but her circumstances became worse. She had little left other than the medals which her husband had won. So she put them up for sale for the money they might bring.

The premier offered Lady Cowans an extra pension from the civil lists, amounting to $500 a year to be paid quarterly. She immediately refused.

A number of influential men, deploring the nation's ingratitude, are trying to make amends. But Lady Cowans says it is too late.

THE POET

I have been singing alone,
Songs woven out of my days,
Sadness and gladness and praise—
Soft little songs of my own.

One was the song of the springs;
One was the song of a kiss;
Though the spring was unheeding,
Nor stayed with me long.
And the kiss was goodly to the singer
And song.
Both of them left me with this:
Something of beauty to sing.

One who passed by in the street
Lingered a moment to hear:
"That was from your heart to my heart
he said—"

Nay, I shall sing it when he has been dead
Many and many a year
Others will find it as sweet.

I have been singing alone,
Songs woven out of my days,
Sadness and gladness and praise—
Soft little songs of my own.

AMERICAN WOMEN SUFFERING FROM DRESSMAKER SHORTAGE

SCRANTON, Pa., June 22; In the opinion of the country's chief department store executives, American women are suffering from a shortage of dressmakers. This fact was revealed a few days ago by a questionnaire sent out by the Woman's Institute of Domestic Arts and Sciences, Scranton. Executives of the largest department store in the country's principal cities were asked whether there was a shortage of professional dressmakers in their community. One hundred and thirty-three replies were in the affirmative. The existence of a shortage was denied by 58 executives, located principally in New England cities.

The shortage of dressmakers was found to be general from coast to coast with the exception of four New England states. It was declared to be particularly acute in Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois and Michigan.

PLEASURE IN MAKING OWN LINGERIE

It rarely pays to make ordinary underthings but the woman who loves exquisite lingerie will not only find it an economy but a pleasure to make her own.

If she insists upon silk, crepe de chine is the most satisfactory material. But China and Japan silk and chiffon cloth are close seconds and wear quite as well as the fine batistes.

Sometimes one can pick up plain lingerie at the shops reasonably priced, and then by trimming it with bits from the scrap bag, can transform it into such pieces as, if bought from the exclusive shops, would come well within the luxury class lingerie.

This, too, is true of corsets. Buy them of, say, satin-faced cotton at $2.50 and run full of lace across the top or a ruching of satin ribbon. Add lace medallions to the front, appliqueing them with pretticolored silk and a bow or rosette of satin ribbon at the top and there of satin ribbon at the top and there you have an expensive looking corset, made perhaps entirely from odds and ends of ribbon and laces.

Half-worn lingerie blouses with their embroidered fronts are often available for camisoles. Wide ribbons or widths of silk are easily converted into underbodices for wear with the straight fronts merely by the addition of shoulder straps of narrower ribbon and sewing the ends in a seam. French seams or corded ones are made by turning in each edge, then sewing the two together in over and over fashion with very close stitches.

There are several ways of inserting lace, but the most satisfactory is to baste it on carefully alongside each edge, then cut the material away leaving as narrow an edge as can be turned in to prevent raveling. Then overcast the two edges, that is the lace and fabric together in cord fashion, as already explained.

Medallions are always an attractive and easy method of decoration, as also are ribbon bows or choux, which are made of many loops. Cockades, dangling, are newer. Watteau roses in chiffon or silk which come by the yard can be used in dainty wreath effects.

FRYING FISH

Fry fish in salted fat. It imparts a much better flavor.

TODAY'S RECIPES

The glorious Fourth of July will soon be here, and again the provider of food for the family is asking herself what she can serve that will carry out the day's meaning. Of course she might have a day of independence herself and give her family very simple meals. But with the numerous aids of crepe paper, favors, flags and emblems, she can decorate her table beautifully and then serve food which will taste good.

Narrow red, white and blue ribbon may serve for tying together rolled wafers or cookies. Little flags flying from small cakes, or ice cream, and small rolls tied in red, white and blue paper like a fire cracker will all serve to entertain the younger members of the family, and some of the older ones!

Flowers help a great deal in table decoration. One of the prettiest combinations being red roses, "bachelor buttons" or corn flowers, and a soft white flower such as "baby's breath." Another is to place in flower holders, set in a shallow glass dish tall sprays of blue hollyhock or lupin, and around these red and white roses or peonies.

For the dinner on the Fourth the following menu includes food in season, and would not be difficult to cook or serve.

Large ripe strawberries (hulls left on) Boiled Salmon Egg Sauce, Cucumbers Roast Lamb Brown Gravy Green Peas, New Potatoes, Ice Cream, Small Cakes, Coffee.

The strawberries, about eight should be served with the hulls on around a little mound of powdered sugar. A plate is best for these.

Cucumbers are thinly sliced dressed with the salmon course.

Have a small flag flying from the ice cream, and the little cakes may be mixing confectioner's sugar with fresh strawberry juice.

The dinner may be still more simple by serving either salmon or lamb as the main dish.

Rolls or bread are of course served.

Dresses of Tub Silk

The most popular material for the plain trim dresses one sees on tennis courts, in canoes and along the beaches is tub silk.

Plain tub silks in white, blue beige, or any other shade one prefers shares honors with striped tub silks.

Summer skirts and blouses, too are showing a decided preference for this practical and very attractive material.

GET OUT IN OPEN AS A MOTOR CAMPER

The up to date gasoline burning stove is a boon to the motorist who likes to cook by the wayside. It will cook anything that a house gas range will and at a surprisingly low cost. The fuel is always at hand in the tank of the car. They are safe dependable and inexpensive.

The gasoline burning stove is fed by the gas generated by a spray of raw gasoline passing through a hot pipe. It is perfectly simple in operation and requires no further attention than filling its tank, pumping in a little air and heating the generator by lighting a little raw gas beneath it. In actual use it is most simple and highly satisfactory. With the addition of an oven, all sorts of baking and roasting can be done.

WOOD BURNERS

The wood-burning stove, that is a set up affair much like a small kitchen range, is a very fine bit of equipment. These fold up flat and take up hardly any room when not set up. Of course, they will cook anything and usually wood is plentiful at any camping ground. These stoves possess something the gasoline stove does not: they give out heat so they are a mighty welcome thing on a cold day.

The open air grate (wood burning) is so inexpensive and useful that no camper ought to be without one. Some are made open on all four sides and up on four legs, with the grate perhaps 10 inches from the ground. Others more elaborate, have three sides of sheet iron. These, of course, can be placed advantageously so as to work most efficiently in the wind. A folding oven usually comes with this type of semi-enclosed stove to permit of baking and roasting. A very small supply of wood will cook a meal on one of these excellent stoves. The grates are usually large enough to hold two good-size stew pans and a coffee pot.

Combination Used

One wood-burning stove or grate and a gasoline stove make an outfit that leaves nothing to be desired. There are times when wood is hard to get or when wood is hard to get or when the rain is so severe that it is difficult to build a fire. There are also times when gas might be short. So the two make a great team.

There are other kinds of stoves and roasting apparatus which are good. Those burning solidified alcohol have their place. There is also one using acetylene gas from a portable tank which gives a fine, steady flame. But every auto-camper ought to carry at least one first-class cooking stove of some sort in a fireplace of stones gathered in a field is a relic of the Indians and has no place in the catalog of the successful motor-camper.
